

Purissima Historic Green Burial Cemetery

The choice for resting with nature

Welcome to a peaceful place to rest

Purissima Historic Cemetery dates back to the 1860's when the town of Purissima (Spanish for "purest") was situated here, complete with a post office, hotel, dance hall, schoolhouse, livery stable, saloon, and several stores. A lumber mill supported the redwood logging operation in the Santa Cruz mountains. The town was abandoned before WWII. In 2017, Ed Bixby purchased the overgrown cemetery. He then cleaned up the trails and historic gravesites to create a green burial space. The property is surrounded by massive cedar and pine trees alongside the Purissima creek with sweeping views of the Pacific Ocean.

Why green? Traditional burials and cremations create a lot of greenhouse emissions. The use of a metal casket and concrete vault creates a significant amount of carbon dioxide in their construction and transportation. Cremation emits enough gas to run a typical house for over a week or drive a SUV over 400 miles. Green burial is an option that has minimal environmental impact that aids in the conservation of natural resources.

To choose your plot: Check PrePlanWithPatricia.com for upcoming group tour dates or contact Patricia to schedule a tour. If self-touring, take a flag marker from behind the shed, write your name on it and place it securely in the ground where you wish your plot to be. Take a picture of the location with a reference point (tree etc.). You can also drop a pin on the map of your smart phone to capture the GPS coordinates. Email or text a description of the location and picture to Patricia (email below). Once purchased, your plot will be surveyed, a stone marker will be placed and you will be sent a deed to your property.
